To a Certain EARL.

My Lord,

AFTER what you have done towards the Ruin of your Country, so remarkably as to become the Subject of every one's Pen, it cannot be amiss that I submit the following Pamphlet to your serious Perusal, and perhaps (now) better'd Judgment. You are sensible, my Lord, how great a Share you had in contriving and carrying on those pernicious Acts, which bear in the front of 'em nothing less than the Mark of the Beast; for they seem calculated to no other End, but to bring in upon us the Tyranny of France, and the Bigotry of Rome.

Your Lordship certainly did not imagine that you did Justice to your fellow Subjects, when you depriv'd 'em of the common Liberties of English Men, that of Serving their Country: You could not but know, that to do this was (in a great Measure) to unhinge the Government you were at the Head of, 'twas to undermine the Constitution, to destroy the Friends of the Protestant Succession, and to pave a way for the Pretender.

Again, my Lord, what Advantage did your Lordship propose to the Church, from persecuting the Dissenters with your Schism-Act? Do you think Your Church the more secure? No, no, my Lord, that's not the way, Sacheverel, Walton, and your other Trumpeters, tell us she's in Danger still: However, we know, and bless God for it, that there's no Church but that of Rome, in Danger.

But now, my Lord, the Day of Reckoning comes, We shall see how much or how little you were actuated by a true Love for your Country; we shall see into the Bottom of all former Managements: It will be enquir'd, how much France gave for a Separate Peace? how much to Build and Fortify Mardyke? what Expence she was at in procuring a late General to desert a Confederate, Victorious Army, who with any other Commander, wou'd have forc'd France

France to sue for a Peace, as ignoble and inglorious to her, as now she boasts to have given us.

If you thought it Love to your Country, to embezzle her Treasures, forsake her Friends, break her solemn Leagues, ruin her Trade, interrupt her Navigation, and baffle her Succession, you have been the most Loyal of Mortals, in your own Opinion; but you mistake. YOU shou'd have preserv'd the Honour of your Queen, YOU shou'd have been faithful in all your Posts, YOU shou'd have strengthen'd the Unity of Minds, in all Her Majesty's Subjects, YOU shou'd have endeavour'd to promote our Trade, to make Religion flourish, And in short, your Lordship shou'd have prefer'd Great Britain's Good and Glory to your own.

Such is a Country's Love; but as for those To Honour and to Britain equal Foes,
Their Love is sordid, mercenary, base,
And ends at last in Ruin and Disgrace.
Whilst ev'ry where the Golden Trump of Fame,
Makes known the Loyal, Faithful Patriot's Name,
Traitors shall by the Hand of Justice fall,
Without a Tear to deck their Funeral;
Our Children's Children shall hereafter tell
(And curse their Names) the Crimes for which they

There is a great deal more which I might say to your Lordship in Relation to your Crimes, but you will see 'em plainly, tho' abstractly, if you read a Leaf or two further: I might also comfort you under your present deplorable and despicable State, by telling of you that our King is fam'd for Justice and Humanity, and therefore you need expect no other Treatment from him but what you deserve. I have also for your sake added hereto a List of your Accusers; that you may see they are Men heretofore as remarkable for their sincere Love to Britain, and a Protestant-British King, as you have been in Zeal for the Service of France and the Pretender; nor do I suppose that they will now fail to do Justice to the injured Cause of Europe, or to revenge the Murder of the Glorious Catalans.

Who'l lose their Heads for these great Crimes?
By B——ke and H——ly.

REASONS.

REASONS

For Repealing

The Act against OCCASIONAL CONFORMITY.

THIS Act (with Submission) ought to be repeal'd, because it seems to take away the Right of Rational Creatures and Natives of England; when God and Nature has left 'em at Liberty to determine and chuse their Religion for themselves, which Divine Law of Nature cannot be superseded by any Mortal Injunction; and because the very Constitution of our Government supposes any Person capable of the highest Offices, who shall be chosen to them by the People; their free Election being look'd upon as the Reason for Obedience.

2. There ought no such Act as this to be made, or suffer'd to continue in Force against Dissenters, upon Account of their Nonconformity, for tho' they do not agree in the lesser Punctilioes of Religion, yet they are sound in the main Articles of Faith; and unblameable in their Conversation.

3. Difference of Religion, tho' the Breaches were far wider than ours are, can be no true Reason (much less good Reason) for excluding any Person from enjoying Offices in the State: Unless the Principles of that Religion are destructive of the Constitution.

4. Dissenters maintain no Political Doctrines, but what are consistent with the greatest Loyalty.

5. They

5. They have always, and on all Occasions, shown themselves to be Abhorrrers of Popery and Tyranny, Lovers of Monarchy, and of the Protestant Religion and Succession.

6. They have suffer'd much in former Reigns, by the malicious and persecuting Spirit of Wicked Men, (yet without flying in the Face of Authority) as some Churchmen do now, who have not had their just Deserts) when their Sufferings were but as it were the Beginning of evils, the like Treatment being design'd for Churchmen also.

7. It is the Strength of a King, to acquire the Love of his People; the Business of a faithful Patriot, to nourish and encrease their mutual Affection: Unanimity is the Bulwark of Nations.

8. Because we cannot expect that Dissenters, who are a rich and numerous Body, will joyn so heartily with us, against the common Enemy, shou'd there be Occasion, as they wou'd had they Liberty and Property to defend, as others have.

9. Our Enemies are at the Bottom of all our Differences, these divide us to destroy us; why shou'd we be assistant to them? The Highwayman who caus'd two Country Fellows to fight 'till they kill'd one another (knowing he cou'd not manage both at a time) wou'd undoubtedly have rob'd and murder'd the Survivor.

10. 'Tis great Injustice, on no good Pretence, but meerly a Capricious Humour, to deprive so great a Multitude of Men, of profitable and creditable Offices, and yet leave them expos'd to mean, chargeable and troublesome ones.

11. The Dissenters have always been found as willing to serve the Government, as any other Subjects.

12. They are in all Respects able to serve, wanting neither natural or acquir'd Abilities; being by all allow'd to be a rich, industrious and knowing People.

These Things consider'd, with many more that I could mention, it is humbly hop'd, that an Act so inhumane, barbarous, unjust and foolish, will be speedily repeal'd.

REASONS

REASONS

For Repealing

The Schism-Act.

1. THE Act call'd (but miscall'd) the Schism Act, ought certainly to be repeal'd; unless we wou'd contentedly give way to the Measures of our Enemies, because they pretend the Security of the Church.
2. A second Reason for repealing the Act is, that it tends to raise as great a Persecution against our Protestant Brethren, as under any of the Pagan Emperors; I say, against our Protestant Brethren, for by Mr. B--ley's refusing to add [and to prevent the Growth of Popery] to the Title of that Bill, it appears, that the Security of the Church of England was not so much intended, as to create Animosities, and fill People with Prejudices against the Dissenters; whereby in the end that Religion wou'd be introduc'd amongst us, the Growth of which they were so loth to prevent.
3. To deny Dissenters the Liberty of educating and instructing their Children after their own way, is to deprive them of the Right of Parents, which Right 'tis impossible for any thinking Man to give up, or even submit to, without great Anguish of Spirit.
4. To force all Teachers of Youth, as well as those in Offices, to go to Church, and constantly to attend the Services thereof, is to put a Restraint upon Mens Consciences, the Government of which no Church but that of Rome, ever claim'd before.

5. It

5. It is to deprive many honest People of their daily Bread; or to make them pawn their Consciences and Souls, to keep themselves from starving.

6. In some Parts of England, to put down dissenting Schools, is to put down the Word of God, because the reading of the Bible wou'd be wholly neglected: 'Tis also a great Discouragement to Charity-Schools, many of which are kept up principally by the Dissenters.

7. This Act ought to be repeal'd, and Dissenting Academies to be tolerated, Because those very Places have been the Nurseries of great and eminent Statesmen, as my Lord Oxford, Bolingbroke, Foley, &c. and who knows what other bright Patriots may arise from such Schools?

8. The Indulgence granted to Dissenters by the Act of Toleration, instead of hurting the Church by Law establish'd, has enlarg'd its Pale very much; for nothing can so soon tempt good Men into Communion with any Church, as the Zeal, Moderation and Charity of her Members, as when he sees them following hard after Righteousness, and as much as in them lies, following Peace with all Men.

9. But if this Act be suffer'd longer to continue in Force, 'twill consequently occasion a Foreign Education, which carries in it these two Mischiefs; 1st. It will transport vast Sums of Money out of the Nation, which else wou'd be circulating in our home Trade. 2^{dly}. 'Twill fill the Minds of young People with Prejudices against their own Country.

10. This Act ought to be repeal'd, Because it is a very ungrateful Return to those Men who settled the principal and staple Trade of the Nation; the Woollen Manufacture being first set up, and now mostly carry'd on by them.

11. I am as much as any one for shewing Favour to the distressed; but this Act gives a Privilege to Foreigners and Refugees, which it denies to Natives.

12. This Act ought to be repeal'd under a Protestant King and honest Parliament, because it is remarkable to have been made by Men of little Religion or Honour.
